

ASIAN SEED ACADEMY OF TECHNOLOGY

Information System Management

Subject

Name: Glyrah Marie T. Mendina

Year and Course: Information System Management

Date: June 09, 2025

JOURNAL 3: Your Best Achievement

Directions: What is your best achievement? It could be outside of school or a personal achievement. What motivated you to finish what you started and what was the feeling you had the moment you accomplished it?

I really don't know what my biggest or best achievement in life is because I tend to just go wherever life takes me. My life has often been pressured by the people around me to do my best in things I either can't do or don't want to do. When people pressure me to do things I really don't want to do, the achievements I get from those efforts don't make me happy.

For me, the best achievement is doing something that makes you both happy and sad at the same time but leaves you feeling satisfied regardless of the outcome. Yes, you might face hardships in working toward your goal, but when the time comes and you truly achieve it, you feel satisfied and happy.

One of my achievements, though I don't really consider it an achievement but rather a result of pressure from others, happened when I was in Grade 8. In our class, I was in the performing class for Dressmaking, a subject I really hated, but since it was a requirement, I did my best to get a high grade. Unfortunately, we had a competition in SOM to create a dress design. Because I love designing, our class president volunteered me for the competition, which I was okay with. But later that afternoon, I found out that aside from creating the design, we also had to make the dress itself, which I really hated. So, for the sake of our class, I was pressured into making a dress I didn't want to make. The result was that I got second place, which isn't bad, but it feels more like an achievement forced on me rather than one I truly earned.